Violet

Hi. My name's Violet, we sort of met on the elevator.

Corky

Sure, I'm Corky.

Violet

Corky. Well I heard you working in here and I was just wondering if you'd like a cup of coffee.

Corky

Sure, come on in...just give me a second.

Violet

Alright. So what happened to Rajeev?

Corky

He went back home to India, someplace, but I think he'll be back.

Violet

So this is just a temporary situation for you?

Corky

Yeah, pretty much...you know, one day at a time.

Violet

Mmm..I guessed you were straight black.

Corky

Good guess. Thanks

Violet

My pleasure. To be perfectly honest, I did have a slightly ulterior motive. I was wondering if I might ask you a little favor?

Corky

Favor.

Violet

Yeah, you see I'm kind of a night person and I was wondering if you might wait a little bit before you start using the power tools.

Corky
Oh, sorry.

Violet
Oh, no, no, no, it's not your fault, it's just the walls here are so terribly thin...

Corky
Really.

Violet
It's like you're in the same room,
but if it's too much trouble, I understand.

Corky
No, it's no trouble at all,
I got a lot of stuff I gotta do.

Violet
You doing all the work yourself?

Corky
Mmmm.

Violet
That is so amazing. I am so in awe of people who can fix things. My dad was like that.
We never had anything new. Whenever anything was broken he would just open it up, tinker with it a little bit, and fix it. His hands were magic.....
I'll bet your car is 20 years old.

Corky
Truck.

Violet
Truck, of course.

Corky
'63 Chevy.

Violet

I knew it. Well I guess I should be going.
You can drop the cup off at any time.

Corky

Thanks.

Violet

My pleasure.
